 I never had any misconception about Reddit's transparency or censorship. The mechanics of the site have always made censorship possible, and in fact encourage it. I don't come here for free speech, I know it's not welcome in 99% of subreddits.

 [-] ky1e [S] 6 points 4 hours ago

 I wish I had the luxury of being able to care about "free speech" on a privately owned entertainment website.

permalink save parent give gold

 [-] kleinbl00 4 points 3 hours ago

 We laugh about this, we joke about this, we assert this over and over and over, and we're not wrong - but we're also remiss in ignoring how fundamental the "vote" is to Reddit. The most basic form of interaction any user has with Reddit is also the most basic form of interaction any citizen has with democracy.

Reddit is clearly not a democracy... but it pretends a lot harder than any other libertarian dystopia I know. People should be forgiven their confusion over the issue; there is a bit of a bait'n'switch going on.

permalink save parent give gold

 [-] ky1e [S] 2 points 2 hours ago

 What also gets ignored is the Hide function. Reddit would be a lot better if people chose to hide and ignore content they don't personally like, rather than downvote.

permalink save parent give gold

  [-] kleinbl00 1 point 2 hours ago

True enough - but again, "hide" is anathema to Reddit's advertised culture. Here's the only statistically significant example of the Admins talking about hiding.

I mean, obviously I care about free speech, but I seek it elsewhere, not on a, as you said, entertainment site.

I have no real idea who this account is/was, but I'm wary of people who announce their departures - I see it as a very political move. It reminds me of the ol' "go out in a blaze of glory" theatric.

I noticed the account wrote, "We've still been able to pretend like reddit was here and it was still the best way to spend time online, but I grow tired of this delusion."

delusion (noun) An idiosyncratic belief or impression that is firmly maintained despite being contradicted by what is generally accepted as reality or rational argument, typically a symptom of mental disorder: the delusion of being watched.

As an amateur student of the English language, I must remind future writers of reddit resignation posts that illusion is preferred to delusion - that's why people say, "I've been disillusioned."

He announced his "retirement" right after he announced his big /r/modlog project, which tells me that he was upset at how little traction /r/modlog got and wanted a way to get more attention.

I wonder if this whole 'radical transparency' movement first found it's impetus in the minds of children who felt deep feelings of frustration when Mom and Dad went to another room to discuss "What's to be done about Little Johnny/Janey"?

 You win.

Enjoy it.

You may want to kick me out of this sub. But it won't do any good at this point. Everything is archived.

I'm still trying to decide if when and how to most effectively nuke it with the biggest leak /r/modtalk has ever seen

The world will love to see how the top mod of /r/restorethefourth defends the deanonymization of redditors in private and then leaks from this sub to harass me while he is defended by this cancerous mod team.

The world will love to see how you constantly demean, torment and insult those who think transparency is a good idea.

Lets see how reddit likes real transparency.

 You are more delusional than XM. You honestly act like a fucking internet forum is the last bastion of free speech in the world and that there is some grand conspiracy against you. What's comical is that all of the anger towards you and the people you associate with is because you act like you have some imperative to harass mods doing their jobs. No one will miss you or the stupid stunts you pull, what the fuck were you thinking trying to push an agenda in /r/SuicideWatch

 I am not even sure what these people are going for. Do they want a hands-off approach to moderation? Weren't the experiments in F7U12 enough proof that nobody would want that? I am honestly puzzled.
